November Rain near normal in some locations

A few cold fronts moving through the country made a significant impact on rainfall generally across the Middle Mississippi Valley region. This will provide a flood crest moving down the big river in coming weeks that may actually be extended by additional heavy rains expected this weekend across Arkansas and western Tennessee. What this means is...just like this past La Nina spring...a flood event will be flowing through an otherwise drier than normal lower part of the valley. In addition to rainfall, the fronts have brought an early onset to winter well into the Deep South.
