

Alan Sealls

Alan Sealls is Chief Meteorologist at WKRG-TV, in Mobile, AL.

Alan has over 25 years of experience in TV. He not only holds bachelors and masters degrees in meteorology from Cornell and from Florida State, but Alan also has professional certifications from the AMS (American Meteorological Society) and the NWA (National Weather Association). Alan is a Fellow of the AMS- a distinction held by a small fraction of meteorologists.

Alan Sealls has written and produced weather programs for WKRG-TV, as well as 30 weather videos for schools, distributed by Discovery Education throughout North America. Before arriving in Mobile in 1999, Alan was a meteorologist at WMAQ-TV in Chicago. Prior to that Alan was a meteorologist for 5 years at Chicago superstation WGN-TV. While there, he was a meteorology professor at Columbia College in Chicago.

He currently teaches weather broadcasting at the University of South Alabama, each spring. From 1988-1992, Alan Sealls was a meteorologist at WTMJ-TV & Radio, in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. His career started in Albany, Georgia, at WALB-TV. Along with local and state awards for broadcasting, Alan is a five-time Emmy winner, with a dozen Emmy nominations. He also won a national award from the American Meteorological Society in 2009 for a series on climate change. Alan serves as a Councilor for the AMS. He often is a panelist and presenter for national conventions.

